SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Luke 16:19-31. The Beggar at the Gate

This reflection is written against the backdrop of Malcolm Turnbull's address to the Special Summit on Refugees and the thwarted attempt to deliver humanitarian aid in Syria.

Last week I suggested that the parables are not just moral tales about good behaviour, nor slick answers to complex questions. They are meant to stop us in our tracks rather than reinforcing our existing mindsets (prejudices?). Admittedly, the Rich Man and Lazarus looks like a moral tale: justice seems to be served because the rich man who has lived a life of privilege and closed his heart to the beggar at his gate, must endure the flames of Hades, while Lazarus is transported by angels, presumably to heaven, to be with Abraham.

But surely the moral lesson cannot be to encourage people to give alms to avoid the fires of hell, even if these are taken metaphorically. Self-preservation is hardly the loftiest motivation for behaving compassionately. So what is Jesus trying to subvert here? Jesus' contemporaries would not have seen these two characters in the same light as we do. They would not have been on the side of the underdog. At least the rich ones wouldn't. They believed that prosperity was a sign of God's favour, while poverty and illness were signs of God's disfavour. So what has changed, I hear some of you say.

Of course Jesus wants me to notice the person at my gate and to relieve their suffering if I can – not out of a spirit of 'do-goodery', but recognising that I am not so different from that person. I may not be needy in precisely the same way. But it is often a case of 'there but for the grace of God go I', not expressed as a pious afterthought, but as really knowing how much we owe to luck rather than just deserts in being born in a particular country, into a particular family, within a particular socioeconomic group. Our grounds for entitlement are pretty flimsy. Do we also need to acknowledge that we, sometimes unwittingly, participate in economic and social structures that perpetuate inequality? Perhaps the parable also reminds us that we ignore our inner beggar at our peril.

What is it about being rich that is spiritually dangerous? Perhaps it is the pride and sense of entitlement that comes with presumed wealth of any kind. Or the fear arising from perceived scarcity that causes us to lock the gate or close our borders. In any case, Jesus reminds us that inner transformation won't come from being warned about consequences. Perhaps it is only the poverty of spirit that comes from heartbreak or failure of some kind that opens individuals to change. But what about the need for global change I signalled at the beginning of this reflection?

National Anglicare Conference 2016

I mentioned last week that I would write about the Anglicare Australia National Conference that I attended in Darwin recently, and so I am.

It was really my first conference since coming to St John's Care, although I did attend the opening service and smoking ceremony of the previous conference held in Canberra, soon after I started.

The conference title was "Creative Edge" with the themes of "innovation, challenge, identity and place". Indigenous and domestic violence themes also permeated. Our own Anglicare CEO, Jeremy Halcrow was the Conference Chair.

Apart from just being in Darwin, the highlights of the conference for me were:

- ◆ The Welcome to Country by Mr. Richard Fejo of the Larrakia Nation, including the playing of the didgeridoo in the Cathedral. I think there should be more didgeridoo played in Church.
- ◆ The keynote address by General David Morrison AO and 2016 Australian of the Year. He spoke for over an hour without notes and then answered questions. He was so impressive.
- ◆ A presentation by Charlie King and Kevin Baxter about the NO MORE Campaign against domestic violence. Kevin, a Tiwi man, shared his very moving story of being both a perpetrator and victim of domestic violence.
- ◆ A presentation by Professor Simon Biggs on the purpose of a long life – beyond the economics of ageing.
- ◆ A performance of traditional dance by "One Mob", a group of young Aboriginal men from the local prison.
- ◆ The National Anglicare Awards at Government House. We were nominated in the Partnership category for an award. I thought we should have won. We didn't.
- ◆ I was able to catch up with friends from the Samaritans Foundation in Newcastle.
- ◆ I developed a much greater appreciation of the work of Anglicare across the country. Anglicare Australia is a network of 36 independent agencies which provides services to 1 in 30 Australians in any given year.

I was also able to stay on for a couple of days with my family. We visited Litchfield and Kakadu National Parks and we were able to revisit Ubirr, which is famous for its Aboriginal rock art galleries and the amazing views over Arnhem Land. It is probably the most spiritual place I have ever been.

My thanks to Jeremy and his team for his invitation to the conference and for his ongoing support of our partnership.

Wish list: biscuits, long life milk, tinned fruit

Retreat at Galong 16-18 September

The parish retreat last weekend was nourishing to our souls and restful to our bodies, with the gentle teaching from Alice-Anne in the warmed comfort that defied the discouraging weather outside. (Of course we had to traverse the icy corridors to get there!) There was something restful too in the beauty of the surroundings, seen from every window, with great swirls of yellow flowering Canola, in the paddocks opposite. A painter's delight!

The theme of the retreat was: "Living the Blessing, Becoming a Blessing", with four presentations, solidly based on Scripture, each followed by a period of silent reflection and application to one's personal situation. Insights could then be shared in small groups, with just one or two others, as we might choose (some feeling reluctant to share deeply personal thoughts). It was often deeply touching, and courageous, as people revealed their vulnerable inner selves and personal lives in the confidence that nothing said went outside the walls of that room. Writing/journaling often brought further insight.

Much of the program was in silence, so as not to intrude on others' reflections, and there was plenty of un-programmed quiet time to read, write, rug up and walk in the lovely countryside or snooze if that is what busy, working people's bodies needed most. But meal times were convivial and talking was OK, with abundant food that was good but not fancy. One might almost go on the parish retreat for a little holiday from busy daily life!

But the spiritual food provided for our souls by Alice-Anne, a spiritual Director who has followed the contemplative path for most of her life despite raising a family, was the best part of all and gave encouragement to us "ordinary" folk who struggle to find time to meet the needs of our souls in daily life.

Notes from Parish Council meeting 20 September 2016 ...

- ◆ Reports were received from parish working groups and ministry teams, with appreciation for their work, and decisions were made where needed.
- ◆ The Wardens are organising the Induction Service for our new Rector on 1 November, including invitations to people from outside the parish. It will be quite an evening!
- ◆ Briefing is being prepared for the new Rector on a range of aspects of parish life.
- ◆ The office in the Rainbow Centre will be repainted and consideration given to longer term office accommodation for the new Rector.
- ◆ The financial situation of the parish remains strong; donations by the parish for wider work were authorised, to the (budget-approved) value of $12,000.
- ◆ Planning for the mini-fete and plant sale is advancing well (see notice elsewhere in the Bulletin).
- ◆ The Covenant Care management committee has undertaken a strategic planning exercise.
- ◆ Receipts for donations to the Safe Shelter are still to come, but will be received before long.
- ◆ The stages of information provision to new people as they are welcomed to the parish were decided. First is the brief Welcome brochure, then a little later a handbook with information about the parish and contact information for clergy, ministry teams, wardens, working groups, parish council and other office holders. This will now include a statement about Safe Ministries at Holy Covenant, which will be useful for all parishioners in due course when the form of the full parish roll is finalised.
- ◆ Parish Council considered the Safety and Hazard Audit checklist prepared by the Workplace Health and Safety team. Most recommended actions have already been undertaken by the Resources Team and further consideration will be given to the remaining points. The WH&S policy for the parish is accessible on the web site, and the major work of this team is a significant foundation for the parish. Reporting of relevant incidents is now carried out in accordance with Diocesan requirements.
- ◆ Political advertising on the public land below the Worship Centre was noted; PC considered it was not appropriate for the parish to take any action to have such advertisements moved.

Please let Beth know if you can be involved (heyde@westnet.com.au).
